

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY EDITION

THE SPOILED BRAT: 100 KILLED

OUR POLICE FIRST FIGHT

One of the biggest police shakings that has taken place in Boston in years is expected as a result of a beating. Patrolman Edward C. Fitzgerald of the East Dedham street station received at the hands of two policemen attached to the same station in Garland street, South End, who were supposed to be the police and only came to light today. Fitzgerald was badly used up in the melee and Superintendent Pierce and Captain Driscoll are conducting an investigation, which is expected to disclose a startling condition of affairs in the Boston Police Department.

STEFANSSON SAFE BNT SEPARATED FROM SHIP

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—Advices received here from Mr. Stefanesson say that the ship carrying the same name, which was expected to have been for months, has been separated from the ship. Stefanesson arrived at Nicholson on February 18. He left the Karik in September to engage in a whaling hunt. A blizzard arose and the ship was driven out to sea.

Judge Ben Lindsay Becomes Playwright

DENVER, Feb. 23.—Judge Ben Lindsay has written a four-act play based on his experience with children in the Denver Juvenile Court, which is to be produced in September. Burford Hamden, who played the leading part in Macbeth's "Blue Bird," will take the star character, that of a street urchin, whose counterpart is a Denver Newby. "My wife was my inspiration," declared Judge Lindsay, in explaining how he happened to write the play.

Queen Mary Censors Books for Princess

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Queen Mary has constituted herself censor of all books Princess Mary reads. This duty was hitherto performed by one of the royal chaplains, the Rev. Percy Edwards, who allowed a certain work on socialism and marriage to slip past him.

Mrs. N. L. M'Manus of Malden Dead

Mrs. Nellie L. M'Manus, wife of Henry P. M'Manus, of 62 Hancock street, died early today. She was thirty-four years of age and was the mother of three children. NEW PARIS HATS 12-INCH FEATHERS

The New Spring Hat in Paris are different—very. Americans must make up their minds to a change in the fashions for hats, which are perched on top of the head, showing most of the hair. The brims are small and the crowns often low. The trimming is high.

The "wigwag" hat is favorite, with feathers standing and meeting at the top, like an Indian headdress, at a height of twelve inches. Three-cornered hats are in favor, the point in front and one side tilted high.

The fashions of Massachusetts will pass on the tango for the first time tomorrow, when two young Lowell people will be assigned in that city, following their arrests on a war train after they had been spotted from a ball by the city's official dance band.

The tango, often arranged at the last of public opinion, where it has been widely denounced and is vigorously defended. It is now to have its final status passed upon.

Frank Hennessey and Angelina Marcotte, each twenty, are the dancers, along with the much-discussed tango. Hennessey and Mrs. Marcotte were led from the floor of a dance hall by Lowell's dance band, which was playing the tango.

Que George Took a Hack, but This One Took Patrol Wagon

Whereas the oft-remembered George Washington took a hack at the cherry tree and got his name on history's pages, George Washington of 1914 took the patrol wagon of No. 14 Newcomb street, Roxbury, and got his name in the police history of Boston. He will be charged tomorrow with eight others, charged with coining on the George tree.

Zola's powerful novel "Germinal" is about to be presented by Pathe in five reels, and this great novel is being printed in serial instalments in the AMERICAN. It is not possible to do justice to this great photo-drama within the space limits of one instalment.

Another instalment of "Germinal" will be printed later in the AMERICAN. Wait for this great Pathe production and see it in the moving pictures when it is on exhibition at the theatres.

"GERMINAL"

The Story of the Great Coal Strike.

By EMILE ZOLA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

When Stephen Lantier, his friend, Meh, and the other coal miners of Voreux go to the mine office to draw their fortnightly wages they are surrounded to find a notice posted announcing a reduction in their amount of pay.

There is a crushing blow to the miners, for by taking less wages and having to work longer hours they are able under the present scale to earn barely enough to keep body and soul together. Before they have decided what action to take a serious accident occurs in the mine, little Johnny Males is killed.

The miners decide to strike and that will be a struggle for life.

Lucy was at Marchington's gathering her acquaintance with him. She had been the object of an old acquaintance, but all this was now behind her. She had taken his eyes off the director, who had been the object of her admiration and admiration of the presence of his guests. During the dinner he had been the object of her admiration and admiration of the presence of his guests.

CHAPTER IV.
The Miner's Demand.

ALL at once, the director of the mine, the previous night, Stephen and some of his fellow workmen had chosen the delegates that were to wait upon the director the next morning. When, during the evening, Stephen Males found out that his husband was to form part of the delegation, she felt very dejected and asked him whether he wanted to go. He answered that he would allow himself to be thus dragged along, but he would not be a delegate. He would not be a delegate.

The latter was like one dumbstruck. His words refused to come. "No, that's not the question," he said. "The question is whether we should be more than any one else."

SEEKS HUSBAND 'REVEALED' TO HER IN DREAM

Prompted by a dream, in which she saw the whereabouts of her husband, who disappeared fifteen months ago, was revealed to her, Mrs. Della Todd of No. 314 Warren street, yesterday, plans to seek him today in London.

James Todd, a former Belmont lawyer, is the husband who is missing. Mrs. Todd will be accompanied in her search by a constable with a warrant for Todd's arrest for alleged failure to pay a debt of $200. She will provide separate support for his wife and two minor children. She said: "I am confident I will find him only a few weeks ago I dreamed he was working in Lexington, and there, but had left about two weeks before. He was ordered to stay a week to wait for my two children, but he has not done so. He owes me over $200 now."

Dole Sees Duty in Immigrant Problem

"Here in America we are striving for a democratic civilization which assimilates these varied elements. After our laws have been regulated to exclude the imbecile, the criminal and the manifestly unfit, must we not as Christians consider those questions in regard to our immigrant population?" asked the Rev. C. F. Dole, speaking at the Boston Y. M. C. A. forum.

GIRL FAINTS AS SHE PLANS TO WED IN HOSPITAL

Because the bride-to-be fainted while planning to wed her sick fiance at the Hotel Hospital, the marriage of Miss Mary A. Hughes to the Marquis of St. John of Everet, which was scheduled to take place in the open ward at that institution yesterday, was postponed indefinitely on the advice of doctors and friends of the couple.

While trying to complete arrangements for the ceremony the bride-to-be collapsed at the foot of her fiance and for a while treatment was necessary for both the girl and the patient. It was some time before the young woman revived and then Dr. Jaenisch advised that she postpone the marriage. After Miss Hughes and St. John had talked the matter over they decided that the advice should be followed. St. John's condition is not thought dangerous.

"The Red Roosters of America"

UNDER THIS whimsical title are banded together a number of advertising men who believe in their work and whose creed contains a sermon.

Q The Red Roosters meet life and its labor with a laugh, yet their work in the world is serious. They believe in backing up words with deeds, principles with practice and life by the living of it.

Q They are self-styled, "A brotherhood of men engaged in advertising work who meet once a month to forget dull cares and the petty annoyances of business life and to be boys again just for a night."

Q Mark well the spirit of this—the real religion it reflects—you who advertise and you who read advertising.

Q In spirit all true advertising men are Red Roosters—though the order, being comparatively new, comprises less than a hundred men in America and only four in Europe. Together they provide a big part of the life-blood and sinews of our newspapers, magazines and advertising agencies.

Q Know that this same spirit which makes advertising the vital thing it is today. The same straight-from-the-heart sentiment—the same ringing conviction of truth—is to be found in every successful advertisement.

Q That's how advertising has grown to be the great, overshadowing, economical institution it is today—for advertisers and consumers alike. It must produce mutual profit or it perishes.

Q The Creed of The Red Roosters is but an echo of the hour. For the world is beginning to realize, with these men, that truth in advertising is inherent—that it is not only a virtue but a necessity.

Q Yet one does not see these men bowed down with the weight of the trust put upon them. Instead, they shoulder their responsibility with a smile, and carry it in a way to compel confidence in this great commercial force.

Q It is this realization which is responsible for The Red Roosters. It is the sureness of their profession's foundation which makes them men who combine enthusiasm with effort, effectiveness with energy, unselfishness with service.

Q A mighty force is advertising, when it embodies truth, because the greatest law of the universe is that truth must win!

Q And that's why in the beginning of this new era the crowing of The Red Rooster Creed will be heard 'round the universe.

Q Witness a part of The Red Rooster creed:

"If the truce of 'ente-tainment' proved the ice is a place for fun, (t h c h is in p.b.c.), for serious no soum ch tation, (u h c is in secret), and then a oppo: ity for an interchange o' wit and the clash of m.n.i.a. wor's which reduces all to a common lark and allows the man to shi.e forth."

You should remember that neglected colds at this season of the year quickly lead to pneumonia and that you can fortify the system with Father John's Melt Me, and from it gain strength to ward off disease. Free from dangerous stimulants.

PAUCKE MYRANLAND TELLS HOW HE NEARLY FAILED AS HIS OWN FIGHT MANAGER

Johnny Evers Says— BRAVES WILL FINISH HIGH AND HE WILL GET A BONUS

By JOHN J. EVERS.

Except baseball, there is scarcely a sport that is not loved by professionalists. In most branches of athletics if one becomes a professional he takes a step backward in the social scale and in the estimation of society.

It is not so in baseball. The reason is that the great national game has been well conducted and after the little dirty occasional by the Federal League has subsided, baseball will continue to be well conducted.

Baseball is now recognized as an honorable trade. The game requires fine physical condition, and it involves moral patriotism. And it brings its rewards.

HARD TO GET FIRST-CLASS MEN.
Years ago, when baseball first became a professional sport, the players were looked upon, and in many cases justly, as itinerant "rough-necks." That all ended when the sport was put on a business basis. With the evolution of the game modernism was abolished, but nowadays a case of modernism in race, indeed. There are few rowdy ball players left.

When the American League was introduced in establishing itself as a major organization in every sense of the word, the demand for first-class ball players was doubled. But the finding and developing of first-class ball players had proved to be the hardest problem of the modern game.

The clubs are now to be sent South for spring practice and training. It will then be up to the managers of the teams to look over the talent that has been secured for them from all parts of the country. Most of the recruits will be found wanting and will have to be sent back to the minor leagues for further development.

MANAGER HAS A TIGHT JOB.
Managing a baseball team is, I believe, one of the hardest jobs to tackle that there is in any business or profession. This year I will be a soldier in the ranks, and it will be up to me to obey the orders of Mr. Stallings, my manager, just as I expected my players to obey my orders when I was manager of the Cubs last year.

The responsibilities of a manager are great. He is not only responsible to the owner of the club, but to the baseball public of the city he ties up with. From all I have heard and from a knowledge of his record, Mr. Stallings, I believe, is a great organizer of a ball club.

There is a clause in my contract with the Boston Club which provides that I get a bonus over my regular salary if the club finishes among the first three clubs. If we win the pennant I get more than I do if we finish third.

From a knowledge of Stallings' methods and considering the fighting spirit of the club last season, and in view of the fact that some of the other clubs—notably the Phillies—will be weaker this year than they were last year, I sincerely believe I will win my bonus.

CARPENTIER TO BE HONORED ON 20TH BIRTHDAY

PALM, Feb. 22.—George Carpentier, the heavyweight champion pugilist of Europe and the idol of the "extra" sporting public, is to have a big "blowout" in Paris on the occasion of his twentieth birthday anniversary.

In view of his remarkable achievements in the ring, it is difficult to realize that Carpentier is but twenty years old. It is not so difficult to understand, however, when it is remembered that he began his career as a fighter at the early age of twelve.

At that time he weighed but a scanty eighty pounds and was known as the "Little Demon." At the age of fourteen he was proclaimed the amateur bantam champion of France.

Four years later he won the "feather" honors. In 1911 he took the European middleweight title from Tom Sullivan, and then he began climbing up heavily.

His latest victory was his decisive win over Pat O'Brien in the "bantam" division. In this and other of his recent fights Carpentier showed a complete change of style from that which he displayed in the early part of his career. Formerly it was perfectly apparent to every spectator that he fought for the love of fighting.

He smiled from going to fight and never sought to avoid a fight, but if by taking this medicine he could give a larger dose of the same sort to his opponent, but now it is a different matter. The old smile is missing and he is cool and calculating in every move. What he has lost in youthful enthusiasm he has gained in knowledge of the science of the game.

'Second Matty' Will Have Another Trial

MARLIN, Tex., Feb. 22.—Raymond "Second Matty" Drucker, once a New York City convict, determined to do a "comeback" by getting out of the "comeback" house, but he was arrested by the police on the way.

"Second Matty" was arrested on the way to the court house, where he was to be tried for a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon. He was arrested on the way to the court house, where he was to be tried for a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon.

Off Week for Hockey Players at the Arena

Although there are only two games scheduled to be played at the Boston arena this week, these attractions are creating more interest than any that have taken place this season.

NUTS WILL FIND A WAY.
It looks upon his foot.
And skins the shimmering sweat

From landing on his back.

The plume is open water.
No terrors has for him;
He holds his body in a tight
To him upon his glove.

Though water's soft in summer.
To his body is true.
He'll find a way to win.
He'll find a way to win.

JUST WHY.
An individual fan who desires that baseball shall go along as of old wants to know why the O. B. managers do not protect their rights in court and force players held under the reserve clause to stick with the old leagues.

The chief reason, say it, is that no manager could be dragged into court to test the reserve clause, knowing that he would have no more chance than the gladiator in a world's series fight.

It is the opinion of able lawyers that the reserve clause violates the contract law, but the courts have refused to sign the contract, because the contract makes no provision for the reserve clause when the player has reached the expiration of the first term.

From contract the reserve clause alone is sufficient to contract the player never becomes a free agent, but is forced to sign over and over again at any figure his employer sees fit to name. Any court that would would knock such a jag-handled arrangement into a pile of rags and shreds. That is why—and that is why—will be about all.

THE SERPENT'S TOOTH.

And he magnates belov'd "in-gratitude."

At such times it is not cooking up new and sensational things to say about Mr. Murphy, who winks the National League leaders of their letting go of the lease on Washington Park, Brooklyn.

McLaughlin Takes Issue With Wilding

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Marion McLaughlin, tennis champion of America, does not agree with Arthur Wilding, Australian, champion of the world, that the game could be bettered by amending the rules so that only one stroke should be permitted for each play. Wilding recently made such a suggestion and today it was first called to McLaughlin's attention.

To hold a serve to one chance," he said, "would result in a better game and a more interesting one. The only increase in speed gained would be less time taken for each set. There would be no increase in the speed of the play, and I take it that the only thing gained at all is a better quality of play."

The good player should play with all idea of scoring by speed alone.

GEORGE E. PHAIR 'SAYS'

Speaking of baseball and politics, there are had days for both Charlie Murphy.

This stronger Lewis is a young man and quite healthy. Therefore, it is necessary for a few more years he may succeed in throwing somebody.

John Evers will not go on the stage and tell what he thinks of his own. However, they wouldn't let him use that sort of language.

Willie Ritchie's foot has returned in form, enabling him to start another campaign of kidnapping.

LONELINESS.
Alfred Muller on a summer day went out to see Chicago play.

But soon the heat it from the place. A fog of four upon her face.

"It scared me," said the damsel fair; "I was the only person there."

The Cardinals and Browns will play their annual Spring series in Florida. The kind-hearted officials will not inflict unnecessary torture on the home fans.

There is a certain resemblance between the present day Stranger Lewis and Evan Lewis, the druggist of other days. They have the same eyes.

If Ebbetts will only fall as easily as the public does, Frank Gots will be the slightest trouble in coming back.

It is said that Kid Elberfeld has signed with a National League club. And we thought the Federal League and signed all the aged and infirm athletes.

Dahlen Ignores Federals' Offer

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Bill Dahlen, ex-manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, cannot be counted as a candidate to manage the Brooklyn club of the Federal League, in fact, he will not jump to the Fed in any capacity. This was learned on yesterday's authority today.

Several days ago Dahlen received a telegram from the big men of the Federal League telling him to join the first train for Chicago to take over a "big business proposition." The message told the former manager of the Dodgers that "all expenses of your trip will be guaranteed in advance."

Dahlen did not answer the telegram and will not.

Johnson Is Ready to Aid the Federals

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—President of the American League, John W. Johnson, has declared his willingness to aid the Federal League in its struggle to get a foothold in the big city.

Johnson has been asked to lend his name to the Federal League, but he has declined to do so.

WALSH-POEHLER RATTLE FAVORITES IN ALLEY MATCH

Paul Poeehler and Archie Walsh are heavy favorites in their twenty-round contest which will take place at the New Boston Alley tonight.

According to one prominent sportswriter, Walsh-Poeehler is one of the best fights of the season.

The fight will be witnessed by one of the largest crowds in the history of the local pug game.

Early this morning a large number of fans gathered at the New Boston Alley to see the fight.

Others are expected later today. Dahlen and Ebbetts will be well represented at the match, and the Chicago Cubs will also be present.

The four contestants worked out on the New Boston Alley tonight and after considerable pin splitting exhibited themselves in the best of form.

The winners of this match will probably be recognized by Harvey Alter and Joe McKee.

Aggies Marksmen in Second Place

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The results of the recently held competition for the International Rifle Shooting Championship, held in the United States, made public today, show that the Aggie Marksmen of the Massachusetts Agricultural College are in second place.

The Aggie Marksmen, who were defeated by the Harvard team, were in second place in the competition.
